Heritage Regeneration Trust

Introduction to Plas Llanelly House

The development and restoration plans for Plas Llanelly House has been in existence since the 1990's when Llanelli Town Council purchased the then vacant 18th C Georgian property. The Carmarthenshire Heritage Regeneration Trust (CHRT) became involved in the late 1990's and worked to acquire the lease from the Council and to raise the nearly £7m needed to purchase, design, plan, restore, and fit out the property as a community and visitor based heritage Centre.

Llanelly House was designed to offer an exciting interpretation of the restored House as well as providing a range of heritage attractions, cafe, retail and education facilities and services for visitors and to the local community. The House will need to be self sustaining through a balanced selection of income generation and income earning activities. Integral to the plans for Llanelli House as a sustainable visitor attraction are the inclusion of well trained and motivated volunteers, representative of the community and the environment in which the House operates.

Plas Llanelly House opened on the 6th November 2013 and it is anticipated that it will host more than 30,000 visitors a year. Plans are in development to further enhance the visitor offer and these are due for completion in the Summer of 2014.
